David Chicken

Also known as David McMahon

Drawn to art and music since he was a child, David McMahon was destined to be David Chicken. From painting and guitar lessons to eventually performing in various bands, McMahon had a flare for performing that didn't quite fit in with the typical rock band.

After graduating from the University of North Texas, David began performing across the country, first as the "Toyologist," a character he developed for Toys "R" Us, and soon thereafter as David Chicken. He saw firsthand how music could bring smiles and laughter to kids and parents alike, through positive messages inspiring creativity, exercise and learning.

Nine years later, named "Best of Dallas" by D Magazine, David Chicken has performed nationwide and created three CDs full of catchy original music. He also has an Emmy® Award-winning DVD, The Adventures of ... David Chicken, that Nick Jr. Magazine called "Downright Hilarious."

Why chicken?

The signs were all there. Growing up, David was a fan of the TV show Green Acres. While in college, David had a chicken named Henrietta (and a pig named Arnold, but that's another story). He ended up with the nickname "David McChicken." That name eventually became David Chicken when it was time for a fun and memorable moniker.

What's next?

Springbot Productions – a creative company founded by David McMahon, John Kenny and Glenn Hadsall – has been working with Reel FX Entertainment to create a television pilot that is near completion. David is also hard at work on his fourth CD and second DVD, creating a total of more than 60 original songs and 30 videos. Each David Chicken product is jam packed with totally upbeat and fun-filled music for the whole family to enjoy.

A few thoughts from David ...

"This is what I truly love doing. It is an honor to have families enjoy my music so much. I am thankful for each and every child who has ever danced or sang along to one of my songs. To share a laugh or a smile with them makes my whole life shine.

I vividly remember being a kid and wondering how so many adults seemed to have no idea of what it's like to be a kid. They seemed to have completely forgotten that they ever were a kid and all the wonders – and fears – that you face as a child. I promised myself then that I would always remember the joys of childhood. That's what I aspire to capture in my music." -David Chicken

Mama Chicken

Also known as Jane McMahon

Jane McMahon has loved entertaining her whole life. From her "humorous readings" in elementary school to her singing and dancing performances with David Chicken, she is a rock star by herself. She steals the show every single time with her loving and grandmotherly demeanor and instantly becomes a friend to all. Mama Chicken sings backing vocals – and occasional lead rap – on David's songs and videos.

As a working mom for many years, she knows the importance of making time, as a family, to enjoy quality entertainment together.

Also an ace in the kitchen, her recipes are featured on David's site at <http://www.davidchicken.com/visit/recipes/recipes.html>. Her culinary skills were immortalized in the song "Mama Chicken's Kitchen" and will be a prominent segment in David's upcoming DVD.

Jane's mother, Marie Ruth, traveled with the Chautauqua – a touring entertainment group featuring such greats as Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. Marie passed the love of entertaining on to her daughter and grandson. David and Jane are happy to carry on the family tradition.

"It's a pleasure to be able to perform with David on stage. To see all the joy it brings children warms my heart. I know that David's grandmother Marie is watching and she's very proud of him."
-Jane "Mama Chicken" McMahon
